| SANRA item                                                   | Location in revised manuscript                        | Assessment                                                                                                                                                     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Justification of the article's importance for the readership | Introduction                                          | The Introduction explains the burden of vaccine-preventable infections in CRDs and the implementation gap in adult immunization.                               |
| Statement of concrete aims or formulation of questions       | Introduction                                          | The final paragraph of the Introduction states the objective of synthesizing implementation-oriented evidence and developing a pharmacist-supported framework. |
| Description of the literature search                         | Methods                                               | Databases, search period, search concepts, supplementary guideline/policy sources, and author roles are described.                                             |
| Referencing                                                  | Throughout, particularly the Introduction and Results | Major statements are supported by primary studies, systematic reviews, guidelines, and policy sources.                                                         |
| Scientific reasoning                                         | Results; Strengths and limitations                    | Evidence is distinguished from implementation interpretation; limitations of CRD-specific evidence and heterogeneity are acknowledged.                         |
| Appropriate presentation of data                             | Results, Table 2                                      | Quantitative estimates are reported with effect measures, 95% CIs, and comparators where applicable.                                                           |
